Overview

top
When a report is initially created it's in draft mode. This means that it's currently being edited and cannot be accessed by other users. When the report is complete it's activated, meaning that it's ready for consumption. Different menu options are available through the Report & Edit menus depending on this status.

Report Menu

Draft Report

Option	Description
Save	This allows you to activate the current report. If you've previously activated the report this will replace the previous version.
Save As	This allows you to activate the current report as a new report. The previous active version of the report will remain, with the current version being saved under a new name.
Undo Changes	This allows you to delete the current draft version of the report, returning to the previous active version.
Delete	This deletes the current draft report. If the report was previously activated you will still have that copy of the report.

Active Report

Option	Description
New	This allows you to leave the current report and begin creating a new one.
Copy	This allows you to create a separate copy of the current report, which you can manipulate without effecting the original.
Delete	This allows you to delete the current report from the system.

Edit Menu

Edit Report

top

Once a report has been activated, the next time it is placed into draft mode the active version will remain. This means that the report can still be used on the dashboard, storyboard, discussion, and by report readers. When the edit is complete the report writer will have the option to either Save the report, replacing the current active report, or Save As which creates a new report.

Draft Vs. Active

Active

If a user accesses an active report that currently has a draft version, and they have role permissions to edit reports, they will see this message.

This report is currently being edited and you are viewing the active version. Click here to access the draft version.

This is designed to remind the user that there is a draft version available, and allow them to move between the two versions easily.

Draft

If a user access a draft report that currently has an active version they will see this message.

This draft report has an active version. Save this report to replace the active version with your changes, or click here to view the current active version.

This is designed to remind the user that there is an active version available, allowing them to compare their changes with this version, moving between them easily.

Note: there can only ever be one draft and one active version of a report at a time.

Confirmation Prompts
